I.0 Report Structure

This document illustrates findings from a survey which has been undertaken to help establish awareness and usage of a free education service called “Give and Let Live”. It has been carried out for the Jeanette Crizzle Trust by DJS Research Ltd. The report is split into five distinct sections:

Executive Summary: Full summary of this report;

Background: Including the research objectives;

Methodology: Research design and sample profile;

Research Findings: Full detailed findings of the research;

Conclusions: Associated conclusions and recommendations.

Executive Summary

2.0

- The Jeanette Crizzle Trust commissioned DJS Research Ltd, an independent market research consultancy, to conduct an ad-hoc piece of telephone research with schools to assess awareness and usage levels of a Government education programme called “Give And Let Live”.
- The research will be used to help gauge whether the education programme is having a direct impact in terms of raising awareness in relation to donorship of bone marrow, blood and organ donation.
- The research consisted of 500 short telephone interviews with teachers responsible for PSHE.
- Close to a quarter (23%) of teachers were aware of the Give And Let Live resource but the majority were not (77%).
- Eleven percent said that they had received the Give And Let Live educational resource.
- A small minority out of the total sample (3%) said that they had used it; 97% have not but this is mainly because most are not aware of the resource.
- When asked about the likelihood of using Give And Let Live in the future, the vast majority of schools (76%) said that they are likely to use it.
- It is clear from the research that awareness of the Give And Let Live education programme is low.
- Not surprisingly with low awareness levels, the number of schools using the resource is also low.
- The concept of Give And Let Live is clearly one that can work and will be useful and used by schools. However, to achieve this, more schools need to be told about the resource and have access to it.

3.0 Background

The Jeanette Crizzle Trust is a research organisation, which has been set-up to establish public awareness of bone marrow, blood and organ donation. It will achieve this by conducting a series of research projects, including undertaking independent tracking research and other ad-hoc projects.

DJS Research Ltd, an independent market research company, was commissioned in 2007 to conduct an initial benchmarking stage of tracking research. The research was conducted during June 2007 through to August 2007, prior to the launch of a Government education programme called “Give And Let Live”. The findings from this piece of research can be found here: <http://www.jeanettecrizzletrust.org/default.asp?page=229>

The education programme was launched in September 2007 and is aimed at 14-16 year old pupils, it comprises a teacher’s pack and a website, and includes lesson plans, activity sheets, real life stories, debating topics, games, films and other activities. It is being offered to state and independent secondary schools across the UK and is recommended for use within PSHE, Citizenship, Science and ICT.

Over time the tracking research is intended to help determine the effectiveness of the Government education programme in relation to bone marrow, blood and organ donation. In particular, the research will be used to help gauge whether the education programme is having a direct impact in terms of raising awareness in relation to donorship and also whether levels of donorship start to increase.

Prior to conducting the second wave of tracking research, it was decided by The Jeanette Crizzle Trust that an ad-hoc piece of telephone research should be conducted with schools to assess awareness and usage levels of the Give And Let Live resource.

This document contains the findings from the telephone research.

Research Methodology 4.0

4.1 Method and Sample

The research consisted of a series of short five minute telephone interviews with teachers responsible for PSHE. The main thrust of the interview was to establish whether teachers were aware of the Give And Let Live education programme and, if they were aware of it, to what extent they had used the resource.

The questionnaire used during the interviews is appended at the end of this document.

Schools were randomly selected throughout England, Scotland and Wales. A total of 500 interviews were conducted as follows:

Table 1: Number of Interviews Achieved by Region

Total	North East	Yorkshire and Humberside	East Midlands	East	South East	London	South West	West Midlands	North West	Scotland	Wales
500	40	47	50	45	49	47	46	49	50	45	32

400 interviews (80%) were conducted with state secondary schools and 100 (20%) were with independent schools.

The fieldwork took place from the 16th June – 11th July 2008.

5.0 Research Findings

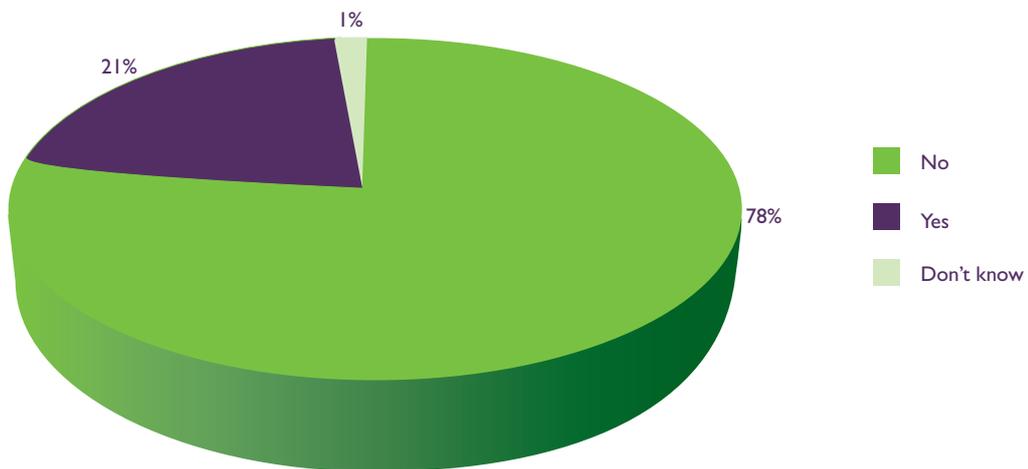

Within this section we will now examine the detailed findings from the research, starting with whether teachers were aware of Give And Let Live.

5.1 Awareness of Give And Let Live

Teachers were initially asked whether they were aware of a new education resource called “Give And Let Live” designed to highlight the concept of donating blood, organs, tissue and bone marrow. A fifth (21%) of teachers were aware of the resource but the majority were not (78%) Figure 1 shows the results in detail.

Q) Are you aware of a new education resource designed to highlight the concept of donating blood, organs, tissue and bone marrow. It is called Give And Let Live?

Base: All Teachers (500)

Interestingly, female teachers (24%) were significantly more likely to be aware of the resource compared with their male counterparts (15%).

Following the initial awareness question, all those who were not aware of Give And Let Live were prompted further, by being given more detail about the resource. After doing this, another 10 teachers said that they did know about the resource, taking awareness levels of Give And Let Live to close to a quarter (23%), as illustrated in Figure 2.

Q) Give And Let Live - is a free educational resource produced by NHS Blood and Transplant. It is aimed at 14-16 year old pupils. It comprises a teacher’s pack and a website, and includes lesson plans, activity sheets, real life stories, debating topics, games, films and other activities. Can I just check again, is that something that you are aware of?

Base: All Teachers (500)

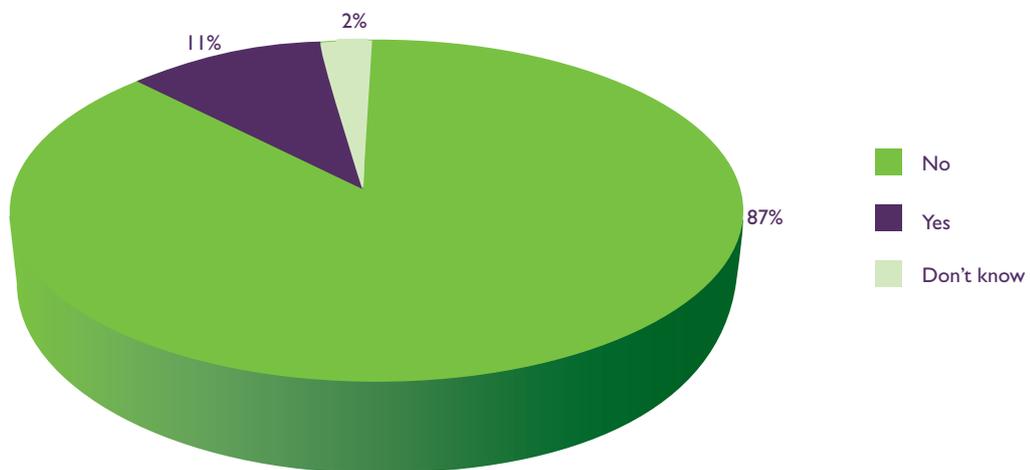

5.2 Usage of Give And Let Live

Prior to asking teachers whether they had used the Give And Let Live resource we checked whether they had received it.

Based on the total sample, 11% said that they had received the Give And Let Live educational resource as outlined in Figure 3. The majority, as already mentioned, were not aware of the resource (77%) or had not received the education pack (10%).

Figure 3: Whether School Has Received “Give And Let Live” Resource

Q) Has your school received the Give And Let Live educational resource?

Base: All Teachers (500)

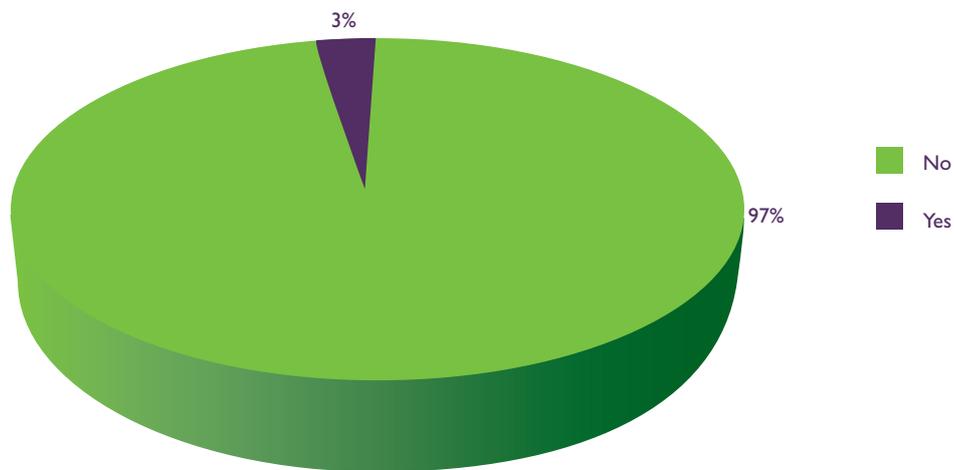

In terms of those who had received the resource, state secondary schools were more likely to have received it (12%) compared with independent schools (5%).

We then asked those who had received the resource whether their school had used Give And Let Live with pupils.

A small minority out of the total sample (3%) said that they had used it; 97% have not but this is mainly because most are not aware of the resource. Figure 4 shows the overall usage levels for all schools.

Figure 4: Whether School Has Used “Give And Let Live” Resource

Q) Has your school used the resource with pupils?

Base: All Teachers (500)

The schools that had received the pack but had not used it, were asked why they had not used the resource yet. The main reasons were because of:

- time restrictions
- the programme for that year had already been written and set
- will be revamping PSHE over the summer
- PSHE only taught on 6 days - hasn't hit the timetable yet

For those that had used the resource (13 schools) we asked them the extent to which Give And Let Live had been used within the school. 8 said it had been used a little, 3 said hardly at all, 1 quite a lot and 1 considerably. The reasons why it had been used a little/hardly at all were because schools:

- find it hard to fit everything into the timetable
- already use a lot of resources for the subject
- have only just looked at it
- need more packs
- have only used it with certain age groups

The two who had used the resource quite a lot or considerably said that it fitted in well with the school ethos.

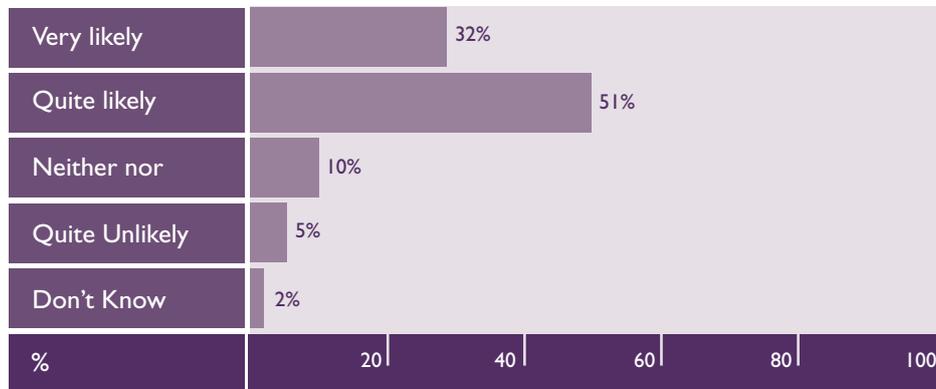

5.3 Future Usage of Give And Let Live

All those who had not used the resource were then asked how likely or unlikely they would be to use Give And Let Live within the future.

Figure 5 shows the results for all those who had received the pack but had not yet used it. The vast majority of these schools (83%) said they were likely to use the resource in the future. A third (32%) said they were very likely. A minority (5%) said they would be quite unlikely with the remainder unsure either way (12%).

Figure 5: Likelihood To Use “Give And Let Live” In Future (Those who have received resource but have not yet used it)

Q) In the future, how likely or unlikely will you be to use the resource in your school?

Base: All Teachers who have received “Give and Let Live” but have not used it yet (41)

The teachers who were likely to use the resource in the future, felt in the main that:

- It’s a relevant/interesting topic for children of that age group – would fit in well
- They are always looking for new topics/resources to inject into the curriculum
- It would make children more aware/raise awareness

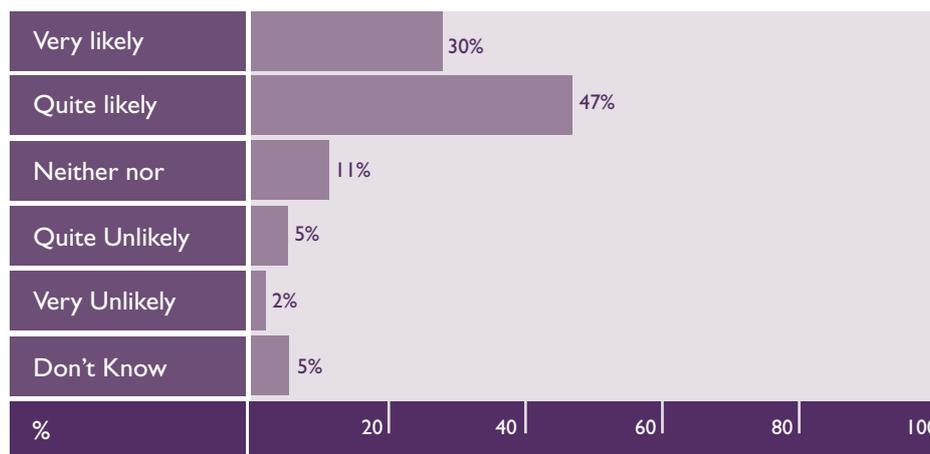

The teachers who were less positive or unsure about using Give And Let Live, in the main said:

- Would need to look into it further
- If time permits
- If it benefited the students
- Concentrating on other topics within PSHE – wouldn't be room in the timetable for anymore

Figure 6 shows future usage for all those who were not aware of Give And Let Live or had not received the resource. Again, the results were positive. Three quarters (77%) said they were likely to use the resource in the future, with close to a third (30%) saying very likely. A minority (7%) said they would be unlikely to use it and 16% were unsure (they said either don't know or neither likely or unlikely).

Figure 6: Likelihood To Use “Give And Let Live” In Future (Those who are not aware of the resource or have not received resource)

Q) Give and Let Live is being offered to state and independent secondary schools across the UK and is recommended for use with PSHE, citizenship, science and ICT. If you were offered the resource, how likely or unlikely would you be to use the resource in your school?

Base: All Teachers who are not aware of “Give and Let Live”, or have not received the resource (446)

Those who were likely to use the resource in the future, gave similar reasons to those stated previously for teachers who had not yet used the pack:

- It's a relevant/interesting topic for children of that age group – would fit in well
- They are always looking for new topics/resources to inject into the curriculum
- It would make children more aware/raise awareness
- It's free

The teachers who were less positive or unsure about using Give And Let Live, in the main said:

- Would need to look into it further
- Concentrating on other topics within PSHE – wouldn't be room in the timetable for it
- If it benefited the students
- If time permits
- Would have to see how the students reacted/responded to it
- PSHE is not taught as a formal lesson – would only use certain sections
- Would have to be passed by our Faith/Church first
- If it was bilingual
- Already running a similar scheme

6.0 Conclusions and Recommendations

- It is clear from the research that awareness of the Give And Let Live education programme is low. Three quarters of schools (77%) are currently not aware of the resource.
- Not surprisingly with low awareness levels, the number of schools using the resource is also low – 3% of schools have used the Give And Let Live resource.
- There is therefore still further work to be done in terms of promoting and marketing the Give And Let Live education resource.
- It might be a case that more substantial marketing and communication is required i.e. repeating/building on what has already been done or the current method and approach may need to be revised.
- The concept of Give And Let Live is clearly one that can work and will be useful and used by schools - the vast majority (76%) say that they are likely to use the resource in the future.
- To achieve this, more schools need to be told about the resource and have access to it.

Academic excellence is our primary objective and the School's success is demonstrated by consistently high standards in GCSE and A level examinations. The Bedford curriculum, extending well beyond the requirements of the National Curriculum, is structured to provide a balanced and varied choice of subjects that will stir the potential in each pupil and challenge his individual strengths.

Excellence is celebrated throughout the School, not least in the provision of its resources. Every department is well equipped, the whole School is computer networked, the new library is perhaps the best of its kind in the country, and the arts facilities are outstanding. Great emphasis is placed upon good subject teaching. Class sizes are small and a strong partnership exists between families and the School with our staff always accessible to pupils and parents.

askMK Productions was one of the first web-based broadcasters in the UK.

The company started as an online directory in 2001. As high-speed broadband connections made internet television possible, askMK Managing Director, Lincoln Bedeau, made the leap from written web content to video content, which enabled the company to become an online TV channel at the end of 2005.

Since then the Channel has featured an array of high profile people from Lewis Hamilton and Sir David Attenborough to Amir Khan and Kevin Peterson. With offices now in Central Milton Keynes and at the Open University askMK services include professional video production, web development as well as internet television.

“These days, people are more likely to base their first impressions of an organisation or event on something they have seen rather than something they have read. Every company needs a website but it has to be more than just the company brochure online,” says Lincoln Bedeau, “Video on demand is a visually dynamic way in which businesses and organisations promote their products and services directly to their customers via a targeted medium. askMK not only makes the promotional video but also provides the platform on which to broadcast it.”

No matter which market you are in, the chances are it has never been more competitive. Being the best no longer ensures success. We live in a world where we are all influenced by what we read, view or hear - image, opinion and perception can be as important as quality and reputation. Increasingly, it is the effectiveness and efficiency of your marketing communications that sets you apart.

DSD can make that difference. In a professional yet relaxed atmosphere, we make time to develop a close working relationship with each client, involving ourselves with the character of the company or institution, ensuring that each is promoted to its full potential, creating and establishing a 'recognisable face' in the market.

Rotary Club of Bedford

Rotary International is a global network of service volunteers. It is the world's largest service organisation for business and professional people, with some 1,210,905 members operating in 168 countries world-wide.

There are some 58,000 Rotarians in Great Britain and Ireland in 1,845 clubs, helping those in need and working towards world understanding and peace. It's a fulfilling role, and Rotarians can get involved as much or as little as their time will allow.

But there is much more. Clubs meet on a regular basis, which allows members to build firm friendships. Every Rotarian has a right to attend any Club meeting anywhere in the world, so there is always somewhere to go, and people to meet, wherever business or leisure travel may take you.

Various Clubs have different emphases, which can reflect differences in size. A small market town may have a Club of perhaps 20 members, whereas in large centres the number can be closer to 100. Some concentrate on local community or vocational projects. Others link up with a sister club in another country to undertake an international project. Each Club decides how it wants to use the resources it has available.
